

Ask Yourself...

- Am I interested in developing into an impactful and innovative leader who demonstrates critical thought and purposeful scholarship in a culturally and racially diverse world?
- Am I ready to acquire knowledge that has both practical and theoretical applicability and to contribute original research to the field of Africology & African American Studies?
- Am I ready to take my career to the next level?

Support When You Need It

Victor Okafor, Ph.D.
Department Head
620 Pray-Harrold
Ypsilanti, MI 48197
vokafor@emich.edu
734.487.3460

emich.edu/msa-aas
f @daaasemu

Explore African American and African Global Communities.
Enhance Your Career.

Propel Your Future

Eastern Michigan University's Master of Arts in Africology & African American Studies (AAAS) takes culture, history, and empowerment to the next level. The first program of its kind in Michigan, the master of arts degree equips students with the resources and support for understanding the implications of living in a multicultural, democratic and diverse world. The program is designed to prepare students from any cultural background for professional and academic careers in relevant areas.

Be Truly Impactful

Graduates of the program will:

- Gain a deep insight into the particular nature of the African American and African Global Communities;
- Obtain the knowledge and skills for meeting the challenges of a racially and ethnically diverse and technologically advanced world;
- Be empowered to write and think clearly and critically.

EMU's Master of AAAS integrates:

- disciplinary knowledge
- theoretical perspectives
- practical skills and training for today's 21st century careers

Choose Your Path

The Master of Arts in Africology & African American Studies offers two optional tracks:

- Applied Track: This track integrates theory and knowledge with practical skills and training for diverse careers in organizations, enterprises, companies, and businesses in a multitude of U.S. communities and beyond.
- Thesis-based Track: This track increases the students' preparedness to tackle a diverse range of issues that affect the lives and experiences of African American and African Global Communities.

*For more information about the specific tracks and admission and program requirements, please visit emich.edu/msa-aas.

Goals Within Reach

A variety of career options are available to successful graduates of the program. Career paths include:

- higher education administrator
- urban youth development
- dean of students
- assistant principal
- case manager
- administration
- counseling

